Jobs fair will offer hundreds of opportunities

HUNDREDS of jobs will be available at a special event being held at City Hall.

The event entitled 'More than a Jobsfair' has been organised by Cardiff Council's Local Training & Enterprise team in partnership with Jobcentre Plus, Careers Wales and Cardiff Youth Council.

The event, which will take place on Thursday, September 20, will provide an opportunity to find out more about a wide variety of real job prospects in Cardiff including the hospitality, catering, retail and call centre sectors.

This year, as part of the Council's summer NEET Transition initiative, the Local Training and Enterprise team has also recruited and trained Event Hosts, from a group of young volunteers who are not currently in education, training or employment to assist employers and visitors at the jobs fair.

The team of volunteers aged between 18 and 24, who are all looking for work, will have been involved in training ahead of the event and will achieve a BTec Level 2 qualification on completion of the course.

Local Training and Enterprise's aim is to equip the volunteers with experience and training which will allow them to demonstrate their skills and abilities to employers at the Jobsfair and also to work with advisors and organisers from Cardiff Council, Jobcentre Plus and Careers Wales.

Cardiff Council Leader, Councillor Heather Joyce, said: "It is very important during these difficult economic times that we work with local communities to promote job opportunities for local people. This event promises to be the biggest Jobsfair we've held in the city centre, and there will be plenty of job and training vacancies on offer.

"We are doing everything we can to help people get back to work and I hope many people make the effort to attend and see what's on offer."

Anyone attending the Jobsfair will also be able to benefit from free advice, brush up their CV's and listen to some really motivational speakers.

Last year's autumn job fair was very successful in placing local people into work, and this year's job's fair is bigger and better with even more companies on board who are actively looking to fill their job vacancies.

These include ING Direct, Premier Inn, Admiral, Debenhams, Tesco, Royal Mail, Hafod, RAF, Special Security Services, Q Care, and many more.

• The free event will be held at City Hall, Cathays Park, Cardiff, from 10am to 3pm on Thursday, September 20.

A day in a life

The latest in a regular series looking at jobs carried out by council employees. This month Sport.Cardiff's Coaching and Workforce Development Officer, Gareth Power, who has had a particular role to play in this year's Olympic football matches in Cardiff, talks to Capital Times.

I'VE worked for Sport.Cardiff, the Council's sport development team, for five years and I have just undergone one of my biggest challenges.

During the lead up to the London 2012 Olympic Games and once Cardiff was announced as a host city, I began my role in recruiting, developing and deploying the hundreds of volunteers, known as Ambassadors, needed to assist with the Olympic football matches and supporting the Olympic and Paralympic teams using Cardiff for their pre-games training.

It was great to be able to offer people such a unique opportunity to be part of the Games.

The volunteers for the Games were fantastic and were such a valuable asset to Cardiff. They carried out a staggering 1,200 shifts, amounting to approx 6,000 hours of volunteering. Their work included welcoming spectators to the city and supporting athletes based here. This contribution was worth over £50,000 in free manpower hours!

The interest we received was fantastic and was made up of a mix of people from all walks of life. As well as including students and retired people, I was surprised by how many full time employees took leave just to be involved.

I thoroughly enjoyed the experience and it was great to get an insight into how much planning and operations go into staging such a large sporting event.

My career started as a volunteer. After graduating from university in sport and physical education I was keen to gain experience in the coaching industry.

With Cardiff Metropolitan University (formally UWIC) producing many sports graduates each year the industry can be competitive. During my studies I would help to run afterschool sports clubs and holiday camps.

I continued to volunteer and coach after graduating in a variety of sports, primarily in athletics.

I went on to gain employment as a school's sport development officer with Sport Cardiff. I was responsible for helping to deliver the 5X60 programme, an initiative which aims to help young people become more active, offering a diverse range of activities giving opportunities to children who may not usually get the chance to be involved.

I then took up a role as Coaching and Workforce Development Officer, a role which involves the recruitment and management of coaches in Cardiff and stems from an innovative partnership with Cardiff Metropolitan University.

They contribute financially to the post allowing the Council to target students for deployment into our development programme during their time in Cardiff, many of whom go on to full time employment.

As with the Olympic Host Council Ambassadors, coaching and volunteer roles can be varied, from helping with the accounts at your local rugby club and coaching at a disability sports club, to handing out oranges during a junior football match!

The army of volunteers will be one of the true legacy achievements of the Games for Cardiff as they continue to support our sporting infrastructure long after the Games have finished. This is important as we work towards being European Capital for Sport in 2014.

Sport Cardiff has a state-of the-art online tool called the Sport Cardiff Volunteer Sports Bureau (VSB) which enables people to access and sign up to volunteering opportunities across the city. The site is accessible to people of a variety of ages and abilities and there are lots of different opportunities available.

It enables volunteers to register and access a variety of opportunities at the click of a button whilst also providing a service for 'providers' of volunteer opportunities to post their placements on the site making them more accessible to a wider audience.

Council launches school attendance campaign

CARDIFF Council has announced there can be no excuses for unauthorised school absences as it launches its new attendance campaign.

The Council is committed to improving the quality of education throughout the city and believes the importance of regular attendance cannot be overestimated. This will help ensure that all young people have the best opportunities for accessing education, employment or training.

Cabinet Member for Education and Lifelong Learning, Councillor Julia Magill, said: "It's a fact that if children have good attendance levels they are likely to achieve better exam results. Research shows that just 17 days missed from school can mean a drop of a GCSE grade across all subjects. Good attendance also shows potential employers that a student is reliable, which may help improve their chances of getting a better job in the future.

"I want parents and carers to realise their responsibility for making sure their child goes to school regularly and doesn't miss out on these important opportunities, which is why the Council has worked with Cardiff's schools to develop an action plan which aims to improve attendance in primary and secondary schools."

In 2010/11 the average attendance for Primary Schools in Cardiff was 92.9 per cent and for Secondary Schools it was 90.4 per cent. This is a loss of 13.5 days per primary pupil and 19.5 days per secondary pupil each year.

Cardiff Council has now asked headteachers not to authorise requests for holidays in term-time. There is no automatic right that enables parents and carers to take a child out of school for a term-time holiday. Schools are open to pupils on 190 days of the year leaving 175 days for holidays and visiting family.

The policy that Cardiff Council used to have, allowing extended holidays, has been replaced because of the evidence that missing school has an adverse impact on children's education. Families are now asked to make arrangements to take these during the six week break in July and August.

The Council has developed a five step approach to managing attendance with schools, school attendance officers, the Education Welfare Service and other agencies to help support families.

The Education Welfare Service has been restructured to allow high schools to employ their very own dedicated school attendance officers to tackle issues in each school more directly. School attendance officers also work with the primary schools in their catchment area to tackle any issues early on.

Truancy sweeps take place across the city, each month, where education welfare officers work with partners including the police to find pupils who should be in school, and warn their parents of their legal responsibility to ensure their child attends school.

Councillor Magill added "It's important that parents and carers play their part in making sure children regularly attend school. Where parents and carers are having problems with getting a child to go to school, they can talk to their child's teachers. If problems are still proving difficult to resolvethe council can offer support and advice."

Students being driven to discuss

STUDENTS have benifitted from an accredited computer course, held at St. Mellons Enterprise Centre as part of the Council's Summer Learning Festival.

The students aged between 13 and 15 attended the course and were striving to gain a European Computer Driving Licence (ECDL).

This is internationally recognised as an IT user's qualification in word processing, spreadsheets, database, presentation, e-mail and internet, as well as computer security and operating system management.

Ten students, of mixed computer ability and knowledge, including boys and girls from schools all over Cardiff, took the course.

All but one of the students (who was offered support to return in the future) completed the qualification in ten working days. It can often take up to 12 months or more to gain an EDCL.

Councillor Julia Magill, Cabinet Member for Education and Lifelong Learning, said: "This is a fantastic achievement, as many of the students had only a passing knowledge of lesser used computer applications like spreadsheets and databases. It is a token of their learning skills that a number of them attained 100 per cent in several of their tests.

"They all deserve congratulations on what they have accomplished."

The course was only one of a number that many of the students were attending during the Summer Learning Festival.

There are four other enterprise centres in Cardiff. As well as running courses as part of the Summer Learning Festival, the enterprise centres are tasked by the Council to help the unemployed get back into work.

The centres offer CV writing services as well as free accredited courses – Food Hygiene, First Aid, Health and Safety and Manual Handling, as well as computer training.

Students on the course celebrate their success.

Pupils Celebrate Exam Success

CARDIFF students can look back in pride at another excellent year for 'A' Level and GCSE results.

This is the third year in which candidates have studied 'A' Level specifications designed to stretch and challenge the ablest students, with an A* grade to mark exceptional achievement. 8.3 per cent of students in Cardiff gained this prestigious grade compared to just 6.0 per cent in Wales.

The overall pass rate (grades A*-E) was 98.6 per cent, and higher than the all-Wales figure. Almost three tenths of the grades awarded were grade A* or A, significantly higher than the overall percentage for Wales. Over four out of five grades awarded to Cardiff's students were grades A, B or C, also higher than the figures for Wales.

In Cardiff the proportion of GCSE pupils achieving grades A*-C is similar to the position in 2011 in a context where nationally this proportion has fallen by over one per cent. The Cardiff figure of 66 per cent is now above the average for Wales where overall 65.4 per cent of pupils gained grades A*-C. The proportion of pupils achieving grades A*-G also rose slightly. At 98.2 per cent this narrowed the gap with the Wales average which stands at 98.7 per cent.

23.1 per cent of the grades awarded in Cardiff were the highest grades (A*/A). This result is the best recorded by the city's schools to date and is now 3.9 per cent ahead of the all-Wales figure of 19.2 percent. 8.6 per cent of pupils achieved the prestigious A* grade compared to just 6.5 per cent for Wales as a whole.

Councillor Julia Magill, Cabinet Member for Education and Lifelong Learning, said: "I am delighted to hear of the success of pupils in this year's GCSE and 'A' Level results. At a time when many GCSE results are falling across the UK, students and teachers in Cardiff are reaping the benefits of all their hard work. 'A' Level results were also above the Wales average so this is very encouraging news. I would like to congratulate all our young people, schools and families on all the hard work undertaken.

"Improving standards is of utmost importance and the results this year represent a good foundation to build on to ensure that all our pupils achieve their full potential.

"I would like to thank the heads and their teaching staff for rising to the challenge and helping to drive forward improvements. We want to do everything we can to help to equip our pupils for success in later life and this year's results demonstrate the improvements which can be made and show the way forward for future successes."

Cardiff enjoys golden success as Olympic host city

EXPECTATIONS were high when Cardiff was not only selected as a host Council for the London 2012 Olympic Games, but also to kick off the entire spectacle - with the first event being played at the Millennium Stadium.

All eyes were on the Welsh capital as the city hosted 11 football matches with Team GB women's football side taking on New Zealand as the start of 19 days of sport got under way - two days before the Games opening ceremony.

With Cardiff bathed in glorious sunshine, thousands of visitors soaked up the excitement before both matches, with the city centre looking at its very best.

Cardiff Council Leader, Councillor Heather Joyce said: "Playing such an important part in the 2012 Games has been an enormous honour for Cardiff and once again we have risen to the occasion.

"A great deal of planning and preparation has taken place and the positive feedback shows that Cardiff exceeded all expectations in helping to deliver what is considered to be the greatest show on earth.

"Hundreds of thousands of people, including visitors and athletes, received a fantastic, warm Cardiff welcome . This has been an amazing opportunity to show what this city has to offer."

Following on from the Olympic Games, Cardiff continued to play an important role during the Paralympics as the city played host to more than 400 athletes using our excellent sporting facilities for pre-games training. Plus the city was the location for one of only four flame festivals UK wide.

During their stay in Cardiff, many of the Olympians and Paralympians have been involved in school visits, community club coaching sessions and have allowed the public access to their open training sessions. The engagement with athletes has really made the connection between Cardiff and London.

Now that Cardiff's role as a host council has drawn to a close, the city is looking to the Games legacy and the hope that people will have been inspired to take up and relish sports, health and fitness for the future.

Councillor Huw Thomas, Cabinet member for Sport, Leisure and Culture, added: "Cardiff has excelled during the Olympic and Paralympic Games and has showcased how well the city can deliver international sporting events on the world stage.

"The amount of excellent praise the city has received during this time has been overwhelming and just reinforces what great infrastructure we have as well as the fantastic people we have working and living here, welcoming people to the city.

"The experience has been a momentous one for the city and has created tremendous economic and cultural opportunities for Cardiff, reflecting the city's status as a world-class sporting capital."

Volunteers shine throughout the Games

Cardiff played a major role in recruiting, developing and deploying the army of volunteers who will be one of the true legacy achievements of the Games for Cardiff as they continue to support our sporting infrastructure long after the Games have finished.

The opportunity of a lifetime allowed people to play an important part by providing assistance in a host of diverse roles. These ranged from supporting the hundreds of athletes using the city as their pre-game training camps to representing Cardiff by welcoming fans and teams to the city.

Around 400 Host Council Ambassadors gave up their time to be involved in the Games and were on hand to inform and direct spectators to the Millennium Stadium for Olympic football matches. The feedback from visitors was hugely positive.

Free programmes of events during the Olympic period also proved to be very popular with families, including comedy, street entertainment and live music on St Mary Street, Queen Street, High Street and The Hayes.

'On Your Marks', a whole day of sporting activity and colourful entertainment, took place throughout the city centre on the opening day of the Games featuring a host of music, games and sport themed street artists such as The Life Guards, the Adjudicators, and Giant Footballers.

The Live Site near St David's Hall screened Olympic coverage throughout, with nearly 1,200 people watching Bradley Wiggins take gold. To compliment the coverage Sport.Cardiff hosted have-a-go sports giving children and young people the chance to take part, as well as promoting local sporting clubs and activities across the city

As an electric buzz of excitement filled the city centre, important operations were taking place backstage to ensure the enjoyment and safety of all who visited the city.

Cardiff Council worked closely with its partners including South Wales Police, the Welsh Government , the Fire Service , Ambulance and Health Services and the Millennium Stadium to ensure the events held in Cardiff ran smoothly.

The city received very positive feedback from everyone, including the London Organising Committee for the Olympic Games (LOCOG) as well as the thousands of visitors who were welcomed into the city.

Geraint visits his gold postbox

Local cyclist and Olympian Geraint Thomas, who took gold at the Games in the team pursuit event, has been commemorated by Royal Mail.

Red post boxes have been painted gold around the country to celebrate every Team GB and Paralympics GB gold medal win during London 2012.

Geraint, originally from Whitchurch, recently visited the postbox on Castle Street which has been painted gold to mark his success.

Geraint said: "The Olympic Games have been a fantastic experience for me, and I was thrilled to hear that the buzz and excitement surrounding them had spread as far as my home town of Cardiff. My only disappointment was that I couldn't be here to enjoy the celebrations due to competing in London.

"I started my track career at Maindy Centre and I hope that the excellent sports provision on offer here in Cardiff, as well as the atmosphere created here in the city, will inspire youngsters to take up the sport and hopefully go on to be Olympic athletes of the future."

Local economy benefits from the Games

As anticipated the Games had a positive impact on the local economy with footfall in the city centre up by 22 per cent on the same period last year. Local retailers, shops, hotels, bars and restaurants reported the Games had been very lucrative and the city's St David's shopping centre said it had seen its second highest number of shoppers this year during that week.

Steven Madeley, of St David's shopping centre and a director of the Cardiff Retail Partnership, said: "Stores selling gift items like handbags and jewellery did particularly well, they felt it was because of people from other countries visiting, people from the International Olympic Committee and tourists.

"As well as the football visitors many local people were going into the city to experience the atmosphere. I think it's kept Cardiff's profile high, showing how well we can do large events."

Hotel bookings made through the Cardiff & Co website were up by more than a third for July compared with 2011 and the Visit Cardiff website experienced more than a third of the usual number of daily visits

The nine football games which followed were just as successful for the city. Attendance figures for matches were healthy with the GB men's games being sold out and hundreds more flocking to the city centre to experience the carnival atmosphere during the day of the men's bronze medal final, the climax to what was a fantastic few weeks in Cardiff.

A trip down memory lane for Ken Follett

INTERNATIONAL bestselling author, Ken Follet returned to his roots last month when he paid a visit to Canton Library. Ken's love of books and writing developed at the library when he was a child.

He said, "I used this library when I was eight or nine years old and, of course, it seems a lot smaller now than it did then. It seemed a long way from Leckwith Avenue to here and it's only about 400 yards, it's a long way for little legs!"

The author whose bestsellers include The Pillars of the Earth and Fall of Giants was at Canton Library as part of a film about his life and was still enthusiastic about what libraries offer in the digital era. "I still think libraries are terrifically important because the way they helped me as a child of not very well off parents. They gave me books my parents couldn't afford and we must remember a lot of people in society today can't afford a computer, he said.

"Yet if they want to find work they need a computer because these days you do it on the internet. It's the same principle that the ability to use these media should be the same for everybody. Books are still very popular and important but libraries offer so much more," he added.

Ken's visit to the library coincided with the stocking of more of his books. "It's a big thrill, I don't know I dreamed of that when I came here as a boy but not long after that I did. When I was 20 I was dreaming Ken Follett would be sitting alongside Ian Fleming on the bookshelf. It never ceases to give me a thrill that it actually happened."

Finally, he offered the following tip for budding authors. "The first question I ask young people who say to me I'd like to be an author, is 'how much do you read?' because nearly everything you know about fiction you learn by reading. You find out what a paragraph is, what a cliff-hanger is, what a chapter is, what a character is, all that stuff you learn by reading and people who want to be authors first have to be readers." What better place to start than your local library?

500th refurbished bike sold

LAST month Capital Times reported that Cardiff Cycle Workshop had taken on its 500th abandoned bike since linking with the council to divert unwanted cycles from landfill by repairing and selling them to the public at affordable prices.

Well, we're very happy to announce the bike in question, a Raleigh mountain bike, has been sold. The workshop holds monthly sales of their refurbished bikes and a lucky man, local musician and lecturer Stephen Wheel, who was in the market for a good quality bike struck gold when he bagged the cycle for £80.

Stephen was delighted with the buy. He said, "Raleigh's have always had a good name and everyone had them when I was a child so when I saw the bike I automatically assumed quality. I feel like I'm getting excellent value for money here as they do such a good job of refurbishing them. I think I've got a fantastic deal, it feels like I've got a brand new bike."

If anyone is interested in swapping four wheels for two wheels at very affordable prices then they can start by contacting Cardiff Cycle Workshop through their website at www.cycletrainingwales.org.uk/cardiffcycleworkshop/ or on 029 2039 7283.

Stephen added, "The scheme has encouraged me to get on two wheels, if I hadn't got such a good bike at such a great a price I probably wouldn't have been so keen to buy a bike so people really should take advantage of it."

Thousands set to flock to the Great British Cheese Festival

CARDIFF Castle is gearing up to host Great British Cheese Festival which takes place between Saturday, September 22 and Sunday, September 23.

Held in the beautiful setting of the castle grounds, the Great British Cheese Festival has become annual pilgrimage for cheese lovers from across the UK, with more than 9,000 people attending last year's event.

The festival is open from 10am to 5pm on both days with in the region of 400 cheeses from around 100 cheese makers available to taste and buy.

Many of the cheeses available are from the Specialist Cheesemakers Association, and will allow people to enjoy their favourite cheeses, alongside cheeses they will be discovering for the very first time.

There will also be numerous samplings, tastings, masterclasses and demonstrations to give visitors a real insight into the subtle art of cheese-making and how best to eat it.

As well as cheese there will be more than 60 great beers and ciders to try with a variety of entertainment also taking place on the Castle Green – including the World Cheese Tossing Championships and Cheese Skittles – as well as music from the bandstand.

Councillor Huw Thomas, Cardiff Council's Cabinet member for Sport, Culture and Leisure, said: "The Great British Cheese Festival is a nationally recognised event which is also very popular with local residents.

"Each year many thousands of visitors travel from the length and breadth of the UK for this event and help to make it such a great success. This year's festival looks set to be better than ever."

Biodiversity Corner

Biodiversity is all living things. It provides us with food, clothing, medicine, building materials and fuel. It helps reduce stress and aids relaxation. Each month Cardiff Council ecologist Laura Palmer will point out some of the great biodiversity you can see across the city.

OCTOBER

AUTUMN is just the right time to get to know fungi. There are up to 15,000 species of fungi known in the UK. They provide an essential role in moving nutrients around. The well known mushrooms we see are just the tip of the iceberg, most of the actual fungi is hidden below ground or behind wood, some actually cover several kilometres.

We only see these complex organisms when they put out fruiting bodies – to us mushrooms and toadstools (different names for the same thing). They come in an amazing range of shapes and colours.

They often have exotic names. In woodlands you may see purple Wood Blewit, or Jelly Ear fungus. In grasslands Golden Spindles shoot up from the ground and Orange Peel fungus makes bright patches.

A visit to any Cardiff woodland or grassland at this time of year will be rewarded with amazing fungi finds, but remember never eat them – stick to the ones from the shop.

I'll be back next month with more biodiversity attractions.

Cardiff's need for speed

IN August, almost 50,000 speedway fans from around the world brought the Millennium Stadium alive as the world's top sixteen Speedway riders battled it out on the track.

Cardiff's link to speedway dates back to 1920 when the White City Stadium in Grangetown held the first speedway race in the city in front of a crowd of 25,000. By the early 1950s, speedway moved to the Penarth Road Stadium which was home to the Cardiff Dragons team. In 2001, the Millennium Stadium became home to the British Speedway GP.

Amy Western has recently donated her story to The Cardiff Story Museum as her family have been involved with speedway in Cardiff since the 1950s.

"My family have always been huge speedway fans and would follow the Cardiff Dragons to away races all over the country. My grandparents met in 1951 through their mutual love of the sport as my grandmother, Olive, was social secretary for the Cardiff East Supporters Club. Although speedway disappeared in Cardiff for a number of years after the crowd numbers declined, their relationship blossomed and they married in 1955. My cousin now covers speedway for Sky Sports and through the sport she has met her husband, seven times British Champion, Scott Nicholls."

Council launches new door step crime campaign and helpline

A wide ranging campaign to tackle door step crime in Cardiff and raise awareness about issues such as cold calling and rogue traders has been launched.

As part of the campaign a new rapid response helpline for victims and potential victims has also been introduced.

The helpline has been designed to make it easier for Cardiff's residents to report issues of door step crime to the council and, where appropriate, Trading Standards can respond to calls within the hour.

This clamp down drive follows the appointment of a dedicated door step crime investigator earlier this year. Ex Police CID officer Mike Pitt has more than 30 years of investigating experience and is determined to use these skills against anyone who thinks they can target Cardiff with this type of criminal activity and get away with it.

Cabinet Member for Housing, Communities and Social Justice, Councillor Lynda Thorne, said:

"Tackling cold callers and putting a stop to these truly despicable doorstep crimes is a key priority for this administration and, on a personal level, something I feel very strongly about.

"I want to move away from the misconception that these are simply 'cowboy' traders who haven't done a job properly, as this undermines the seriousness of what is actually going on here.

"These are calculated crimes carried out by unscrupulous people who are only interested in making a profit, quite literally at the expense of others.

"The price that is paid by those who have been targeted by door step criminality is not just limited to financial loss but also includes emotional trauma and scarring, which can be equally if not more difficult to address.

"This is one of the reasons why we are increasing our efforts to tackle door step crimes but we cannot do this alone.

"We are already working closely with a range of other agencies, including the police and voluntary and business sectors, with the aim of increasing awareness about cold calling and door step crimes, as well as offering advice and support to anyone who thinks they have or may become a target for this type of unlawful activity.

"However, we also believe that everyone can do their bit to help and would therefore encourage communities to work with us on this.

"Keeping an eye out for neighbours and loved ones, particularly if they are elderly or vulnerable, and reporting any suspicious activity to us won't cost you a thing but it may well help to save someone from losing their life-savings or suffering the emotional pain of becoming a victim."

Cardiff Council's Cabinet Member for Environment, Councillor Ashley Govier added: "Our strategy for tackling this issue is wide ranging and we intend to cut these criminals off from all angles and at all levels.

"From my perspective, this includes making the environment these criminals like to operate in untenable, for example by extending our 'no cold-calling zones' and 'nominate a neighbour' schemes across the city.

"By working with other agencies and the wider community we will make Cardiff a no-go area for the people involved in this type of crime."

Cycling wheely is the way forward

CYCLING within the city has received a number of welcome boosts over the past few weeks. From award recognition for the new cycle network Enfys to the launch of new Safer Routes in Communities schemes, cycling in the city is realy flourishing.

Plans have been announced to make cycling around Roath and Cathays safer and easier. As part of the Safe Routes in Communities programme Cardiff Council is tackling some of the main areas that need to be improved. This includes improvement works to Fairoak Road, Wedal Road, Ninian Road roundabout, Shirley Road, Monthermer Road roundabout and the junction of Albany Road / Mackintosh Place / Richmond Road / City Road.

The scheme, which is funded with the Welsh Government, aims to improve accessibility, safety, and encourage walking and cycling within communities.

Announcing the plans Cabinet member for Strategic Planning, Highways, Traffic and Transportation, Councillor Ralph Cook said: "Sustainable, efficient and effective travel is at the heart of this administration's plans to develop the city. There will be a heavy emphasis on sustainable transport and encouraging people to choose cycling, walking or pubic transport for their journeys.

"However, unless the right infrastructure is in place we can't expect people to opt for a sustainable choice, this is why we are investing in making the city more cycling and pedestrian friendly."

The first phase of the project is estimated to be completed in spring 2013 and will incorporate improved access to local community facilities and recreational areas and will seek to reduce traffic speeds.

Councillor Cook added: "The proposals for Roath and Cathays go a long way to ensure that people have an easier, and more importantly, a safer journey. These key arteries of the area will make a huge impact, but to ensure we are getting it right it is imperative that the Safer Routes for Communities is work that the community wants and need."

Cardiff reaps the awards

Cardiff Cycle Network and transport infrastructure has been shortlisted at a number of national and Wales-wide awards.

Cardiff has been shortlisted in three categories at the National Transport Awards 2012, competing with cities across the UK. The three awards the city has been shortlisted for are: Transport City of the Year; Contribution to Sustainable Transport; and Achievements in Cycling.

Alongside the National Transport Awards the city has also been shortlisted at the Chartered Institute of Logistics and Transport (CILT UK) annual awards.

The Council's Strategic Network Cycle Plan has been selected as a finalist in the prestigious Transport Policy, Planning and Implementation category. The Cardiff Cycle Plan has also been named as a finalist in the Wales Planning Awards. Both awards recognise the importance of the Cycle plan to the city.

Cabinet Member for Strategic Planning, Highways, Traffic and Transportation, Councillor Ralph Cook, said: "To be shortlisted for one award at one award ceremony would be quite an achievement but to be recognised by a number of transport bodies in a variety of categories highlights the city's commitment to ensuring that people can travel by walking, cycling and using public transport for more of their journeys.

"For the city to continue to develop as a young European capital, the right infrastructure has to be in place. Creating sustainable and practical transport is a key priority for this administration."

The results of each award will be announced later in the autumn.

At this time of year you may be thinking of getting your house ready for the winter and carrying out some maintenance. However, please remember there are some people who are looking to take advantage.

HERE is some simple guidance on dealing with unwanted callers at your address offering a service.

If in doubt, keep them out - Help us deal with doorstep crime in Wales and get our message to people who may be targeted by ruthless rogue traders or distraction burglars.

Our message is simple - if in doubt, keep them out. Also don't be afraid to report anyone who is suspicious to the police. Call 101 to let them know about a suspected rogue trader or call 999 if a rogue trader has taken money from you and is in your home or still in the neighbourhood. You should also call 999 if you think someone is a distraction burglar.

We all need to report this activity. Just because a cold caller leaves your doorstep, it doesn't mean that they won't target other people in your community. Please always tell the police about any 'suspicious characters'.

Dealing with unwanted cold callers - Not everyone who calls at your door is who they may seem. So you should always be on your guard. They could be a legitimate caller, a rogue trader, or even a distraction burglar. But don't worry. If you read on and always follow our three step plan, you'll know exactly what to do. Remember, genuine callers won't mind waiting whilst you make the appropriate checks.

Together we can crack down on cold callers - If a cold caller doesn't get into your house, they will continue knocking on doors in your neighbourhood until they find someone more vulnerable than you. If the police don't know about them - they can't do anything. So, if someone does call at your door, always report it and call 101 to help safeguard your community.

If you get caught off guard and a cold caller does manage to get into your house, let us know about it as soon as possible. There's nothing to be embarrassed about, and the sooner we know the better chance we have of catching them and recovering your property.

The three step plan - Remember genuine callers will not mind waiting. It's your home. You don't have to let anyone in!

- One: If in doubt, keep them out - It sounds simple, but if you don't let someone in - they will go away. Don't let them pressure you into opening the door.
- Two: Be prepared. Be in control - Think about what to say to doorstep cold callers in advance. And keep a list of key contact numbers near your phone so you can check out legitimate callers. Ask all other unwanted callers to go away.
- Three: Call a neighbour or the police - Contact a local relative or nominated neighbour who can help verify a cold caller. If you think someone is a rogue trader call us on 101. To report a distraction burglar or rogue trader who has taken your money and is still in the area - call 999.

Adamsdown goes Green

A Green Mapping project has taken place in the Adamsdown.

The Adamsdown Green Map was created through a series of workshops and walks with local schools and residents, where people identified their areas of environmental interest.

The map has help to create a visual and exciting picture of Adamsdown showing all the wonderful green spaces the area has to offer, as well as highlighting places that could be developed.

It is also hoped the map will encourage the whole community to make better use of the areas that Adamsdown has to offer.

The map, which was published last year and delivered to every home in the area, has now been transformed into a giant mural that will permanently reside on a green space in Star Street.

The Adamsdown Environmental Action Group launched the mural by going on a walk around the area using stencils to mark the map icons in their specific areas. Throughout the walk people also took photos of the parts of Adamsdown they liked and to map out the areas that could change for the better.

Green Mapping is part of a global movement that was created in 1995 and has spread to over 550 cities, towns and villages in 54 countries.

- If you are interested in taking part or want to find out more please contact Adamsdown Communities First on 029 2046 0899 or email Adamsdowneag@gmail.com

Hound of the Golf Club

ONE Cardiff Dogs Home resident is lucky to be alive after being abandoned by her owner and forced to fend for herself for almost a month in June's torrential weather.

Bute's survival can be attributed to the kind hearted actions of staff from Cardiff Golf Club. They alerted Cardiff Dogs Home to the stray and assisted with her rescue after club members started noticing the two to three year old Cane Corso bitch foraging for food and shelter in the woodlands surrounding the golf course.

Despite being half the recommended weight for a dog of her breed and age, it took almost four days for Cardiff Council's Dogs Warden, Steve Green, to coax Bute out of hiding and rescue her as she was too timid to be approached and would flee if anyone came near her.

However, Bute is now on the road to recovery after spending the last month at Cardiff Dogs Home where staff and volunteers have been helping her to recuperate.

She even managed a recent trip back to the Golf Club to visit her saviours, club stewards Christine and Mark Wilby and golf pro Terry Hansen.

During the visit, Christine Wilby was keen to point out that since her rescue everyone at the club has continued to ask after Bute, wanting to know how "the hound of the golf club" is doing and if she's found a new home yet.

Commenting on the lengthy rescue mission, Cardiff Councillor Ashley Govier said: "I would like to thank Steve and everyone at the golf club for their patience and determination, without which Bute's rescue would have been much more difficult and could have easily hindered her recovery.

"Bute's case was unusual but not unique. Rescuing a dog when it's scared and unsure of its surroundings is never easy and requires careful judgement and actions if it's to be done successfully.

"Fortunately, Bute's story has a happy ending - especially as she has been recently re-homed with a new family and seems to be settling in well. But this isn't always the case.

"There is absolutely no excuse for irresponsible dog ownership and anyone found to be acting in this way could face legal action and/or a fine".

(L to R) Cardiff Council Dog Warden Steve Green and Bute are welcomed back by Christine Wilby, Terry Hansen, and Mark Wilby from Cardiff Golf Club.
